

Abstract:

The present invention relates to organic light emitting devices (OLEDs), and more specifically to efficient OLEDs having an emissive layer having host material with a wide energy gap. The present invention also relates to materials for use as a wide gap host material.